

Supported by a MHDFAS grant, Welland School, near Malvern, held a very successful Arts Week from 2 – 6 November 2015; all the pupils, together with staff and parents worked in class and at home to express their ideas in drawings, rubbings and words. A locally-based Blacksmith and Willow Worker led the Arts Week and based on their ideas all the pupils (the older assisting the younger) were involved in creating a 4-meter-high metal and willow tree structure which is on permanent display at the front of the school.

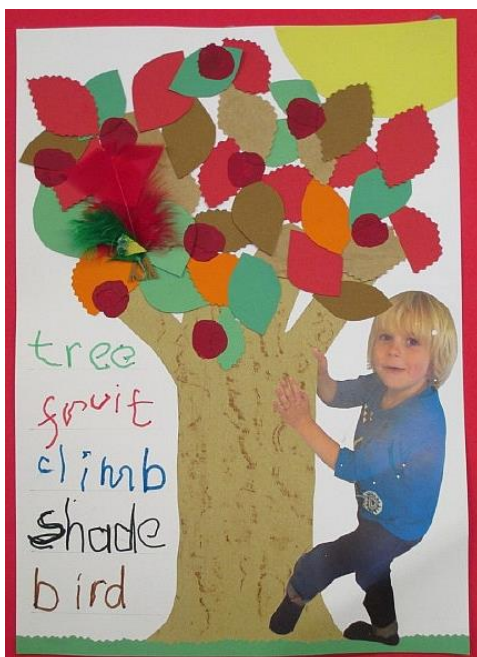

The Head Teacher emphasised how the Arts Week enhanced the school curriculum and stimulated the children's curiosity in areas such as science, maths, written English and citizenship. Below are some of the images from the event.

Blacksmith & Willow Worker building the tree

Chairman Lyn Walsh "What a tree means to me"

What a tree means to me.

Autumn tree views.

Summer tree views

Lyn with young artist